As we understand that the eProject is a step-by-step learning environment that closely simulates the classroom and Lab based learning environment into actual implementation. It is a project implementation at your fingertips!! An electronic, live juncture on the machine that allows you to.

- Practice step by step i.e. laddered approach.
- Build a larger more robust application.
- Usage of certain utilities in applications designed by user.
- Single program to unified code leading to a complete application.
- Learn implementation of concepts in a phased manner.
- Enhance skills and add value.
- Work on real life projects.
- Give a real life scenario and help to create applications more complicated and useful.
- Mentoring through email support.

This project consumed huge amount of work and dedication. Still, implementation would not have been possible if we did not have a support of many individuals. Therefore we would like to extend our sincere gratitude to all of them.

First of all we are thankful to Ms Pham Thi Lanh for providing necessary guidance concerning projects implementation as well as her provision of expertise. Without her superior knowledge and experience, the Project could not have been successful. We also would like to express our sincere thanks towards the members of the team who devoted their time and knowledge in the implementation of this project, and also to the other students for their enthusiastic support during this time.

Finally, We also thank you so much for your information and the “demo” project from India APTECH to help us get more reality experience in this project. Beside several mistakes we had made in the project, we hope to have more opportunities to widen our knowledge in the web developing world.

Your Sincerely,

Team Group 05.

Synopsis

- The Objective of this program we aim is to give a sample project to work on real life projects. These applications help us build a larger, more robust application.
- The objective is not to teach us HTML/JavaScript but to provide us with a real life scenario and help us create basic applications using the tools.
- Hence, we can revise the chapters before we start with the project.
- This project is meant for students who have completed the module of HTML5.
- These programs should be done in the Lab sessions with assistance of the faculty if required.
- The website (in this project) is a tool that help the company to access the international market and gain more and more new customers.
- It is very essential that a student has a clear understanding of the subject.

Problem Definition

DNBC is an established name News and Reporting. They have their network of reporters across the world.

They collect and send all news articles to the main office in London.

Main Office then prepares the news and publish it in newspaper in respective segments.

To make news available in faster to the readers and subscribers, now company is planning to launch a website. This will help in bringing information and news faster and also readers can search and read news from any location.

The website which they demand is suppose to provide user friendly environment and navigation. The important menu must be stated in the top section of the webpage. Also a decent look out and color combination is expected.

The website is to be developed for the Windows Platform using HTML5, JavaScript and Geolocation. The site should work well in all leading browsers including Chrome, IE, Firefox etc.

Having read the project specifications, our team members realize that there are problems and difficulties which may interfere the users' experience. In order to make the most precise decision and look for the best solution to tackle this, each developer has to consider the following querries thoroughly:

1. How to build a layout for an online newspaper website?
2. How many categories is enough?
3. How much content is displayed on a page when they are grouped into categories?
4. What information should be displayed on the homepage?
5. How can users interact with the site?

10 books to read to learn about women's plight in Iran

Mass demonstrations happening in Iran were sparked by the death of a 22-year-old woman named Mahsa "Jina" Amini, in a Tehran hospital on Sept. 16, two days after her arrest by Islamic Republic authorities for failing to properly cover her hair.

Hijab is mandatory in Iran and is enforced by morality police. Iranian officials claim she suffered a heart attack, but witnesses at the police station and her relatives say Amini was severely beaten while she was in custody.

3 books in translation that ask a lot — and allow the reader to ask a lot in return

Many readers, critics, and editors see delicacy, especially on the thematic front, as a sign of quality and challenge, which it frequently is. But gentle, subtle novels are far more common than ones that take the opposite tactic, announcing their difficulty or their defiance from the very first page — a brave strategy, and one that creates a uniquely exciting relationship between author and audience. When a book declares itself a challenge right away, its readers get to make the conscious choice to rise...

Gyms and at-home fitness battle for prominence this holiday season

- The fitness industry appears headed for a strong holiday season, but not everyone will see a boost.
- Inflationary pressures and a post-lockdown reset are poised to benefit traditional gyms and trade-down options — threatening connected at-home fitness equipment like Peloton and Mirror.
- Apparel retailers are hoping the resiliency in fitness will continue to spill over.

8 best world food writing books: Discover new destinations and dishes from your kitchen table

Post-Covid, travel is back on the agenda. The latest figures from the IATA show that global air traffic had recovered to 73 per cent of pre-crisis levels – but for anyone who sought to sate their wanderlust by taking to the skies this summer, the experience may have been a painful one...

9 best horror books to read for Halloween (if you dare)

Since ancient times, people have been scaring the living daylights out of each other with tales of horror and the supernatural. From tormented spirits to soul-eating demons and everything in between, nearly every culture to have existed has tales designed to spark fear in the hearts of its people.

Kurt Vonnegut would have turned 100 today — his war novels are relevant as ever

'Fatty Fatty Boom Boom' details podcaster's battle with weight

Pakistani-born lawyer and media personality Rabia Chaudry is best known for co-hosting the popular Undisclosed podcast — and for her tenacious advocacy for wrongfully convicted family friend Adnan Syed, whose case was featured on Sarah Koenig's 2014 Serial podcast.

'White Horse' is about supernatural horrors — and everyday horrors

Erika T. Wurth's White Horse belongs to the new wave of horror fiction that delivers the creepiness and darkness readers have always associated with the genre, while also packing plenty of social commentary

With 'Foster,' Claire Keegan asks that readers look outward

Claire Keegan has been compared to the Russian author Anton Chekhov and fellow Irish writer William Trevor. She shares their keen sense of empathy, eye for the telling detail, and deep attunement to the moral issues raised by meanness and suffering for witnesses as well as the afflicted.

Bono discusses his new memoir, 'Surrender,' and the faith at U2's core

It was 1976. An Irish kid named Paul Hewson was trying to figure a lot of things out; his mom had died a couple years earlier, when he was just 14. Bono, as he was known, spent a lot of time at home, in Dublin, arguing with his dad and his older brother. But two goals kept him focused — to win over the heart of a girl named Alison Stewart and to become a rock star.

10 books to read to learn about women's plight in Iran

Mass demonstrations happening in Iran were sparked by the death of a 22-year-old woman named Mahsa "Jina" Amini, in a Tehran hospital on Sept. 16, two days after her arrest by Islamic Republic authorities for failing to properly cover her hair. Hijab is mandatory in Iran and is enforced by morality police. Iranian officials claim she suffered a heart attack, but witnesses at the police station and her relatives say Amini was severely beaten while she was in custody.

3 books in translation that ask a lot — and allow the reader to ask a lot in return

Many readers, critics, and editors see delicacy, especially on the thematic front, as a sign of quality and challenge, which it frequently is. But gentle, subtle novels are far more common than ones that take the opposite tactic, announcing their difficulty or their defiance from the very first page — a brave strategy, and one that creates a uniquely exciting relationship between author and audience. When a book declares itself a challenge right away, its readers get to make the conscious choice to rise to the occasion. Doing so generates a sense of investment; it also heightens our expectations. If an author asks a lot of us, we get to ask a lot of that author, too.

Cherries are as synonymous with Christmas as mangoes are with summer. But this year, they may be harder to come by. And as you've probably already guessed, old mate La Niña is to blame.

Why so many restaurants are hooked on Australian barramundi ?

Is there anything more Australian than barramundi? The succulent, sustainable fish is up there with meat pies, lamingtons and Vegemite as an integral part of our culinary heritage. But unlike those other homegrown foods, much of the barra we consume hails from abroad.

8 best world food writing books: Discover new destinations and dishes from your kitchen table

We rated these on their ability to introduce us to less-familiar food culture (The Independent)

Post-Covid, travel is back on the agenda. The latest figures from the IATA show that global air traffic had recovered to 73 per cent of pre-crisis levels – but for anyone who sought to sate their wanderlust by taking to the skies this summer, the experience may have been a painful one...

Airport chaos, mile-long queues (that's if your flight wasn't cancelled), the Russian roulette of lost baggage, it's understandable why not everyone is ready to squeeze themselves into an economy seat quite yet. But there is a way to get a taste of far-flung places without having to leave the warmth of your kitchen.

During the pandemic, the kitchen was a place of safety and sustenance, away from the doom loop of the pandemic. The great stay-at-home encouraged people to get creative with the contents of their kitchen, to venture beyond the microwave and the "ready in 15 minutes" recipes; to slow down and enjoy spending more time cooking.

So as people sought escapism and inspiration, sales of novels and cookbooks soared during the pandemic. As a result, a new cookbook trend has emerged – a book that can whisk you away from it all and immerse you in an entirely different (and possibly new) food culture.

How we tested

We rated the books on their ability to take readers on an edible journey and to introduce them to less-familiar food culture and cuisine. We also considered the quality of the prose (we were after books that were a good, solid read), the level of research undertaken and the quality of the photography, as well as the recipes: their "interestingness", how well they worked and how much we enjoyed eating them.

These cookbooks, written or published during or since the pandemic are far more than collections of recipes. They take you away from it all and deliver you, metaphorically, to the Himalayas, the Baltic states, from Malaysia to Romania. They will leave you better informed about the world – and they will teach you some new delicious kitchen tricks, too.

The best culinary escape books for 2022 are:

- Best overall culinary escape book – ‘Red Sands’ by Caroline Eden, published by Quadrille: £18.55, Hive.co.uk
- Best culinary escape book for fermentation fans – ‘Amber & Rye: A Baltic Food Journey’ by Zuza Zak, published by Murdoch: £18.55, Hive.co.uk
- Best culinary escape book for spice lovers – ‘The Nutmeg Trail’ by Eleanor Ford, published by Murdoch: £20.66, Wordery.com
- Best culinary escape book for spice lovers – ‘The Nutmeg Trail’ by Eleanor Ford, published by Murdoch: £20.66, Wordery.com
- Best culinary escape book for new discoveries – ‘Taste Tibet’ by Julie Kleeman, published by Murdoch: £20, Blackwells.co.uk
- Best culinary escape book for Indian food lovers – ‘Kolkata The Cookbook’ by Rinku Dutt, published by Smith Street Books: £21, Amazon.co.uk
- Best culinary escape book for Laksa lovers – ‘Sambal Shiok’ by Mandy Yin, published by Quadrille: £20, Blackwells.co.uk
- Best culinary escape book for baking fans – ‘Tava: Eastern European Baking and Desserts from Romania and Beyond’ by Irina Georgescu, published by Hardie Grant: £17.59, Hive.co.uk
- Best culinary escape book for travel trailblazers – ‘On the Himalayan Trail: Recipes and Stories from Kashmir to Ladakh’ by Romy Gill, published by Hardie Grant: £20.65, Wordery.com
